

FACTS ABOUT FROGS & Snakes

By Sue Stuever Battel

THE GOOD AND THE BEAUTIFUL LIBRARY

Frogs start life as eggs in the water. They grow into tadpoles. At last they are frogs that live on the land.

Have you seen the feet of a frog? Take a peek at all four feet.

As a frog gets too big for its skin, the skin falls off. The frog bends and bends to get the small skin to come off.
Then the frog eats it!

The small frog here sings a big song. He peeps.

Boy frogs have a big spot
here.

Girl frogs have a small spot.

The frogs here live far away. What frog do you like the best?

Golden Frog

Red-Eyed Tree Frog

Clawed Frog

Dart Frog

Snakes are reptiles. A reptile does not have warm blood like you and I.

A lot of snakes live in this home. A mass of many snakes is called a den, nest, pit, or bed.

Some snakes have bites that can do harm and make us sick, but most snakes do not.

As a snake gets too big for its skin, the skin falls off. A new skin grows.

Snakes have lots of bones.

Most snakes do not see well,
but they can smell well.

Snakes can be small or big. The small snake here is as big as a $1 bill is tall.

Look here at lots of kinds of snakes. The snakes may live by you.

Garter Snake

Milk Snake

Grass Snake

Rattlesnake